I am playing "skipo" with a new friend. I am playing fair. The house is many colors; pink, red and yellow. The house is different but is the same as other houses because it has a door.
There are two little kids and three big kids and the little kids ask the bigger kids to play with them on the playground and the bigger kids say "yes". Then, they all eat together in the lunch room and everyone is included, big or small.
This boy is asking a boy to play football to be nice to him.
I like to visit my grandma in the nursing home and cheer up everyone. I help open the door and make them smile.
Gabi was giving food, a splish-splash pool, a toy snake, and a shirt to poor kids. She let them come over and play in her yard with her dog and showed them her rock collection.
Jackson is helping the other boy up (who fell) and also placed a band-aid on his leg where he fell and hurt his knee. This is how he treats all others with respect and a way he can help someone who's not feeling well.
Lily's picture shows two friends that look different but just finished shopping and now are sharing umbrellas in the rain.
These are different people from other countries. No matter where you come from, we all deserve to be treated with dignity and respect.
Respect Everyone

Helping each other even though they are different.
August drew a picture of a trophy with people of different race, size and gender. August said it doesn't matter where you come from, everyone has a chance to win.
My picture presents two people holding hand under a rainbow.
I'm showing the other person how to do monkey bars. He is smaller so I help him up. I let him go first. He gets up and can do it his second try. It is sunny and raining.
I shared my lunch with my friend who is nice to me. His mommy is white and his daddy is brown.
There is a girl who is having a hard choice between being nice and naughty. She knows it's always important to be nice, but is having a bad day. She decides to be kind to everyone no matter what time it is or what her mood is.
The house is red, white and blue because there are many different people in the world. My friend and I are working together in the garden to help feed people. There are many different flowers from many different places. The sun makes people happy.
Be respectful and be kind. Everyone deserves respect.
Respect, Everyone's, Space, Property, Environment, Character, Traits
Be a Friend First. Two girls are making fun of another girl because she's different than everyone and another girl wants to be her friend.
The children who are a part of a "team" are welcoming to a "new" child that they do not know.
This is a picture of the solar system. It includes all the planets. It does not discriminate against any planet because it looks different. This is dignity and respect.
