Explanation of Procedure

What is a flexible sigmoidoscopy?

A flexible sigmoidoscopy allows a doctor to examine the lower portion of your colon with a scope equipped with a camera that has a light on it. The scope is connected to a monitor that allows the doctor to view your lower colon while performing the procedure.

What can I expect the day of my procedure?

Your procedure will take place in the GI Diagnostic Lab, which is located on the main floor of the hospital. Your procedure will take about two hours from the time you arrive until you are discharged home. First, you will check in at the front desk. Shortly after you complete the check-in process, a nurse will assist you with changing into a hospital gown. Once you have changed, a nurse will take you to the pre-procedure area and review your medical history.

When the physician is ready, you will be taken to a procedure room. You will be attached to a monitor that will watch and record your vital signs. The physician will explain the procedure and answer any questions you may have. You will be asked to sign a consent form allowing the doctor to perform the procedure. The team helping the doctor will position you on your left side. The doctor will start the procedure by placing a scope into your rectum to view various areas of your lower colon.

What happens after the procedure is over?

Once your doctor has completed the procedure, you will be transferred to the recovery area in the GI Lab. A nurse will continue to monitor your vital signs until it is safe to send you home. Before you go home, the nurse will review your written discharge instructions and provide a brief summary of your exam. If a biopsy was done, the results will be sent to you and your physician within 7-10 working days. You will also receive a phone call from a nurse within a few days after your procedure to see how you are feeling.
